

“They’re all about quality of life.”

– Larry and Paula Carter

“It’s never easy to lose a loved one. We thought we knew what hospice was about before Mother got sick, but when Hospice of South Georgia started caring for her, we learned how much hospice care can help. They’re all about quality of life.

The Hospice of South Georgia staff kept us very informed about Mother’s care and choices. We felt her wishes were honored. She stayed at the Langdale Hospice House when she needed extra care. We knew she had a sense of peace when she died, which comforted our family.

The love and compassion toward the patient and the family – it was real. We saw the staff and volunteers go beyond what they had to do. All the special things they did added up. We feel what we learned has opened doors for us to share our wonderful experience with others about Hospice of South Georgia and the Langdale Hospice House.”
